Inaugural collaboration between Mennonite College of Nursing and Department of Health Sciences

Dr. Ann E. Nolte, Distinguished Professor Emerita of Health Education from Illinois State University’s Department of Health Sciences, has initiated the Scholar in Health Education through the financial support of the Community Foundation of McLean County Donor Advised Fund of Ann E. Nolte. Mennonite College of Nursing collaborated with the Department of Health Sciences to cosponsor a presentation by the first Scholar in Health Education, John R. Seffrin, Ph.D., American Cancer Society’s top staff executive in academia, he distinguished himself as a national and international leader in health education, disease prevention, and public health. His presentation, titled “New Directions in Cancer Control and Prevention,” described the positive strides in cancer-related deaths in the United States. We in the health care community cannot, however, rest on our laurels as the rate of adolescent tobacco use in this country is on the rise. From a global perspective, based on the dramatic increase in the use of tobacco products, projections indicate that worldwide cancer-related deaths will skyrocket in the near future. Tobacco-related illness and death are preventable. Nurses and health educators are challenged to become involved in tobacco prevention and cessation programs. Mennonite College of Nursing and Health Sciences students, faculty members, and alumni attended the presentation on February 28. Seffrin met with students and faculty for question-and-answer sessions regarding cancer research and prevention. While at Illinois State University members from the local health care community attended the public presentation, and at least one local physician is interested in working with cancer education and prevention within minority groups. Future collaboration between Mennonite College of Nursing and the Department of Health Education faculty and students promises to be exciting and fruitful.

Thank you, Dr. Ann Nolte and Dr. Marilyn Morrow, chairperson of the Department of Health Sciences, for making this opportunity possible. Alumni interested in participating in tobacco prevention programs and future collaborative efforts between Mennonite College of Nursing and the Department of Health Sciences should call (309) 438-2174 for additional information and opportunities.

Attention, Alumni

Looking for a life-changing experience? Wanting to do something new and different this summer? Interested in branching out as a nursing professional? If your answer is Yes! Yes! Yes!, then you should consider participating in the Mennonite College of Nursing transcultural program as a mentor for nursing students. Overseas student activities on site in Lame Deer, Montana; San Antonio, Texas; or England. Your involvement is certain to make a difference in your world and theirs! For more information, call Karrie Ingalsbe at (309) 438-7400.
The Russia connection

During the 2000-01 academic year, Illinois State University has sponsored the campuswide theme of “Global Connections: A Campus Explo-ration of the Growing World Community.” As a result of a grant coordinated by Karrie Ingalsbe, PhD, RN, Galina Mouravieva, chief nurse of Vladimir City Health Care in Vladimir, Rus- sia, visited Central Illinois for 18 days. On February 27, 2001, Galina presented “Globally Connecting Through Nursing: Nursing in Russia.” Her presentation on March 6, 2001, was titled “Globally Connecting Through Nursing: Nursing Education and Nursing Opportu-nities in Vladimir.” As well as touring Illinois State University, Galina toured the Community Cancer Center, the Community Health Care Clinic, Thomas Mtcallum and Hammit Schools, and several local hos-pitals. She found it beneficial to meet with nursing faculty from Illinois State University, Illinois Wes-leyan University, and Heartland Community Col-lege. Housing for Galina and her interpreter (Olga Vladimirova) was provided by Vladimir Sister Cities Committee members Jana and Orlynn Edge.

Mayo Clinic chooses extern

Lori Stoller, a junior at Mennonite College of Nursing, was selected to work as an extern at Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota, from June 4 to August 10, 2001. Her application was one of 150 chosen out of 450 submitted. Her acceptance was based on several criteria, including grade point average, activities, and essays. Lori volunteers at the American Red Cross and with Disability Concerns at Illinois State University. She is an active member of the Student Nurses Association and is in several honor societies.

Lori will be working in one of the largest neurosurgical/neurological facilities in the nation. She will work with a preceptor, providing quality care to adult critically ill neurologically impaired patients, including head and spinal cord trauma. She also will review a wide variety of surgical proce-dures. The unit for which Lori will be working admits 150 patients each month.

Mennonite College of Nursing has provided a good foundation for this summer externship, and Lori hopes to gain more skills and a higher comfort level working with acute patients. She will return to Mennonite College of Nursing with a real knowledge of the working registered nurse.

Dean’s message

Greenbelt!

Many exciting things are happening at Mennonite College of Nursing at Illinois State University. As we travel around the country, we are arranging to meet with alumni.

Thanks to all of the wonderful Mem-nonite alumni who have visited with us in Colorado, Florida, Texas, Ar-izona, Washington, D.C., Ohio, and Kentucky. These visits renew our connection to the graduates and pro-vide inspiration to all of us. It is a pleasure to get to know you. You are all doing such wonderful things.

Another way we are connecting to alumni is through Homecoming. Please mark your calendars for Homecoming 2001—October 26-27

Mennonite College of Nursing faculty, staff, and students are active participants in the compre-hensive long-range planning process at Illinois State University. The planning document, Educating Illinois: An Action Plan for Distinctiveness and Excellence at Illinois State University, is the action plan that has resulted from the planning process.

Mennonite College of Nursing is proud and excited to be part of this process. The plan focuses on rec-ognizing the strong heritage of Mennonite College of Nursing and identifies five values of the University that reflect Mennonite College of Nursing beliefs and vision. These five values are (1) individualized attention; Illinois State University is dedicated to placing the learner at the center of teaching and research; (2) public opportunity: assuring students access to opportunities; (3) active pursuit of learning: educating the student inside and outside the class-room, so that students appreciate learning as an active and lifelong process; (4) diversity: fostering an inclusive environment that prepares students to be engaged participants in global society; and (5) creative response to change: facilitating personal growth through innovative activities.

As you read this issue of The Flame, I think you will find examples of how Mennonite College of Nursing is leading the way in Educating Illinois. There are many opportu-nities for alumni to become involved with us as we implement the action plan. You can find the com-plete planning document, Educating Illinois, at www.IllinoisState.edu/educatingillinois. I look forward to your ideas and involvement. See you at Homecoming October 26-27!

Adopting an elementary school

Mennonite College of Nursing at Illinois State University has been working to adopt an elemen-tary school in the Bloomington-Normal area. Faculty members from the college and the principal from Irving School, 602 West Jackson Street, Bloomington, have made initial plans for formulating the adopt-a-school concept. Irving has been noted to have a high percentage of disadvantaged stu-dents and like many schools struggles to meet the health care needs of the children when there is only one nurse working between two schools. Initial plans indicate that nursing students and faculty will begin serving at Irving during the next academic year. Mennonite College of Nursing’s first project will be providing approximately 300 backpacks for Irving children who are in need of school supplies for fall 2001.

Sara Campbell, associate dean, said the goal is to have students and faculty in the hallways and classrooms at Irving on a routine basis. In addition, Irving would like to call on the college to assist with special health problems when they occur, such as a lice outbreak. Nursing students will be involved with projects at Irving School as part of their coursework and as part of their membership in the Student Nurses Association. They will work toward educating students about wellness promo-tion and illness prevention. Sara pointed out that another goal of this project is to teach and expose elementary students to health care career opportunities. Alumni are welcome to take part in the Irving School project. Please call (309) 438-2178 for additional information.

Evaluating Illinois
Illinois State University is working to Educate Illinois by becoming “the first-choice public university in Illinois for high-achieving, motivated students who seek an individualized educational experience combined with the resources of a large university.” Mennonite College of Nursing is giving students individualized attention by keeping its focus on the students and ensuring students access to high-quality programs and faculty. By maintaining old traditions and starting new ones, Mennonite is creating the premier graduate program. Students who graduate from Mennonite College of Nursing realize that learning is an active and lifelong process that involves not only a local community but a global society. Faculty, staff, and students are learning innovative applications in undergraduate and graduate studies, research, creative activity, and public service. By the year 2007 Mennonite College of Nursing at Illinois State University will not only have the premier graduate, but also be the nursing college of choice in Illinois.

Mennonite College of Nursing faculty are involved in the Educating Illinois Implementation Committee and the values of Illinois State University. To learn more visit our Web page at http://iwsa.ilstu.edu/educatingillinois.

Teaching nursing home project
Mennonite College of Nursing at Illinois State University and Heritage Enterprises have formed a partnership to develop a teaching nursing home. The benefits of a teaching nursing home are far-reaching. Nursing homes today, have new faces. Not only do they provide care for the frail elderly, they provide care for clients of all ages who may have chronic illnesses that prevent them from being cared for in their homes. Additionally, nursing homes provide an intermediate step between a hospital and home. An example where this type of care is needed is a patient who has suffered a fracture or had joint replacement surgery. Many times, these patients are not ready to meet the demands of maintaining a home when they are discharged from the hospital. Therefore, patients spend recovery time in a nursing home where rehabilitation is continued until they are able to function independently enough to return home.

A primary goal of the project is to increase the number of baccalaureate nurses choosing to work in nursing homes. Many times nursing students have preconceived ideas about nursing homes. They tend to view working in a nursing home as less desirable than working in a hospital or in other areas where nurses are employed. Taking students into the nursing home for different types of clinical experiences will help to dispel some of the stereotypical myths. Students develop relationships with the nurses and the nursing home staff, and find that they use many skills necessary for developing into an expert nurse. By changing the perceptions students may have about nursing homes, the number of graduates choosing to work in this area will increase.

The nursing home staff also benefits from having new graduate students. The enthusiasm, energy, and fresh ideas students bring are welcomed, and delight both the staff and residents. Faculty can provide educational programs for staff as the need arises. Staff provides the much-needed assistance with teaching students about individualized care for residents. Staff also can update faculty on changes in the rules and regulations that affect nursing homes and constantly change.

This new partnership is exciting. A teaching nursing home is a first in the Bloomington-Normal area. Students will participate in research with the faculty and staff. Ongoing projects to determine best practices or most effective interventions for clients are planned. The outcome expected is that the important group, the clients, will benefit most of all.

Associate dean named
Sara Campbell became the associate dean at Mennonite College of Nursing during the summer of 2000. Her vision for the future makes her a perfect fit for this position. When asked to describe the college with one word, her response is “leaves.” She says faculty are working in new ways, conducting research, presenting research, submitting articles and grants, and creating a positive learning environment using technology.

Several nursing courses are offered as Web-assisted courses. Students and faculty both benefit from this type of teaching. It allows students to work at their own pace day or night and helps them to have a better understanding of what goes on in the classroom. One of the greatest benefits is for students who do not always feel comfortable speaking up in class—the Web-assisted course allows students to post questions and participate in discussions about class. Web-assisted courses give faculty the opportunity to be more creative and have additional one-on-one time with the students.

In the future, Sara expects to see the R.N./B.S.N. program totally on-line or as an interactive television in order to help working registered nurse’s get their B.S.N. It is anticipated that more technology will be used across all programs. Currently the college is working toward purchasing a simulator for the prelicensure lab. The simulator would bring nursing situations to the students so they may not encounter at clinical sites and force them to think more critically.

As Sara works in the position of associate dean, the transformation of Mennonite College of Nursing will have a positive impact on the students, faculty, and the community by providing a learning environment that is active and engaging, sending the premier graduate into the nursing community.
Illinois State University Student and Alumni Placement Services is keeping up with technology in providing students, alumni, and employers with a new concept for job placement and recruitment. Recognizing the changing trends in the employment industry, the Illinois State University placement office introduced the use of e-Recruiting in fall of 2000, as a Web-based one-stop shop for students and alumni to connect with potential employers. Students and alumni can use the system to explore full-time career opportunities as well as to search for internships and part-time employment.

The e-Recruiting system provides a centralized location for employers to display company information, job postings, and on-campus interview schedules. Students and alumni can post their cover letters, resumes, and portfolios onto the system for public viewing by employers. Candidates may also apply directly on-line to positions posted and sign up for on-campus interviews. The system provides users with the ability to search for jobs by type, industry, employer name, and recent postings. It is also conveniently available 24 hours a day from the comfort of home.

With full expectations of continued growth, Student and Alumni Placement Services boasts that e-Recruiting provides access to live job postings and employers from a variety of fields. Are you a student or alumni searching for new employment options? Interested in gaining access to a wealth of full-time, internship, and part-time opportunities? Are you an employer with hiring needs? Contact Student and Alumni Placement Services at (309) 438-2200 or jschultea@ilstu.edu for an user name and password to begin taking advantage of this new system.

Association making mark on campus

The Mennonite College of Nursing Student Nurses Association (SNA) is in its second year at Illinois State University. With their efforts, SNA members continue to leave their positive mark on campus through their promotion of health-related activities and community service work.

SNA began the fall 2000 school year by displaying its “Be on Top of the World” Homecoming float during the annual parade. Group members continued their efforts in October through their participation in the Jingle Bell Run for arthritis and by distributing ribbons for breast cancer awareness. In November, three SNA officers attended the national SNA conference in St. Louis, Missouri. This proved to be a valuable experience for the officers, as they returned home with some exciting fundraising ideas and promotional strategies.

In December, SNA sponsored a Christmas party for disadvantaged children in McLean County. Through the donations of local merchants, SNA members were able to distribute presents for all of the children who attended the holiday event. In January they prepared personal hygiene care packages to be distributed to low-income clients in their “Community Health Nursing” class. Funding for this project was obtained through an Illinois State grant.

In February, SNA students cosponsored the Health Career Fair on campus, where students had the opportunity to network with health care providers. Also in February, SNA offered the first of several blood pressure screenings at the Illinois State Student Recreation Center. March was a time for mingling with peers and faculty during the annual Junior-Senior Spring Nursing Banquet at Jumer’s. Entertainment for the evening included a “nursing survivor” skit by the college faculty.

April ushered in continued success as nursing students promoted organ donor awareness during “SpringFest on the Quad.” Through the combined efforts of SNA and the public relations student group, more than 550 students signed the back of their driver’s license and pledged their commitment to notify their family members of their decision to be organ donors.

As the year came to a close SNA welcomed four new officers for the 2001-02 school year: April ushered in continued success as nursing students promoted organ donor awareness during “SpringFest on the Quad.” Through the combined efforts of SNA and the public relations student group, more than 550 students signed the back of their driver’s license and pledged their commitment to notify their family members of their decision to be organ donors.

As the year came to a close SNA welcomed four new officers for the 2001-02 school year: Jill Bennett, president; Misty Kline, vice president; Ellen Koff, treasurer; and Jamie St. John, secretary. This group also welcomed two new advisors: Dr. Sara Campbell, associate dean, and Pam Lindsey, undergraduate director.

Toward a common goal

When asked, Pam Lindsey, undergraduate director, will say her biggest responsibility is working to keep everyone together to reach a common goal. Keeping everyone together means meeting the needs of faculty, staff, administration, and students. She is working to create an environment that is student focused while allowing faculty and staff to be creative and involved in other areas of academia.

Several steps have been taken to maintain a small college feel at Mennonite College of Nursing at Illinois State University. Faculty members have office hours and often have an open-door policy that allows for one-on-one time with students who need extra help. Distance education classes are being created to accommodate the R.N.-B.S.N. students who are trying to juggle full-time jobs and family life in addition to returning to school. Three advisors work closely with students regarding academic issues. Clinical and lab classes continue to have small faculty-to-student ratios. Students are involved in college committees, faculty searches, and a peer support program that links seniors with first-year students. All of this creates a college atmosphere that is student friendly.

Does student focus take away from faculty members’ ability to participate in research and grant writing? No. As a matter of fact, faculty members are becoming more involved than ever before in grant writing and research projects both locally and nationally. This also benefits students by exposing them to research.

As the interim undergraduate director, Pam stays busy keeping everyone focused on the students. She is the contact person for current and prospective undergraduate students as well as the faculty who teach them. Mennonite College of Nursing continues to maintain a small-college atmosphere that is student focused.

Goodwin Nursing Scholarship Fund

With a major gift, Mary Rudelle Goodwin of Sun City West, Arizona, has established the M. Rudelle Goodwin Nursing Scholarship Fund for Mennonite College of Nursing at Illinois State University. It is Mrs. Goodwin’s concern for the nursing shortage and nursing care that led her to establish this fund.

This scholarship will be awarded annually to a Mennonite College of Nursing student in good academic standing as evidenced by a cumulative grade point average of at least 3.0 and a demonstrated financial need that is not addressed through state and federal funding.

Mary Rudelle Goodwin has been a lifelong leader and active volunteer. Many groups have benefited from her service, including the Wesley Methodist Church, Brokaw Hospital, Women’s Society for Christian Services, Friendship Club, Illinois Federation of Women’s Clubs, Philanthemian Reading Circle, and General Federation of Women’s Clubs, where she served as chairperson of international affairs, regional president, and as a member of the national board of directors.

Dorothy Witte is the new Development director for Mennonite College of Nursing at Illinois State University. Her professional background as a sales and marketing representative on both the provider and insurance sides of health care is a great fit for her new challenge as a fundraiser. According to Dorothy, her new position is exciting and humbling. “Working with philanthropists who have a strong desire to gift their resources in support of nursing education is a very fulfilling career opportunity.”

She went on to say, “It is very gratifying to be in the position to witness pleasure on the donor and recipient sides of the giving equation. People’s lives are absolutely changed on both sides.”

Dorothy’s goals for her first year are high. Her primary focus is to increase funding for Mennonite College of Nursing as part of Illinois State University’s Capital Campaign. A complement to this activity is her priority to increase Mennonite alumni interest and involvement in their alma mater, particularly since the move to Illinois State University. “It is all about outreach to donors, alums, and the broader community,” said Dorothy. “I’m thrilled to be building on the existing legacy of this wonderful institution at a time of great change and opportunity in the nursing profession. There are many ways to make this world a better place for having been here, and supporting Mennonite College of Nursing is a wonderful way to do that.”

Yes! I want to make a gift to the M. Rudelle Goodwin Scholarship Fund.

Faculty, administration, staff appointments

The following faculty, administrators, and staff have been appointed since December 2000:

Mary Bailey will begin as a tenure-track assistant professor this summer.

Kerrie Ingalsbe, currently an instructional assistant professor, will become a tenure-track assistant professor for the fall 2001 semester.

Amy Irving is assistant to the dean.

Emily Schlenker will begin as a tenure-track assistant professor for the fall 2001 semester.

Dorothy Witte is Development director for Mennonite College of Nursing.

Faculty recognition

Dr. Nancy Ridenour and Dr. Janie McCray’s distance education program was funded for $24,380 by Illinois State University’s Extended University. Funding for this project will be used to design and implement electronically enhanced B.S.N. completion courses for registered nurses. Target date for full implementation of the R.N./B.S.N. sequence, was approved. The league’s “Report to the National League of Nursing Accrediting Commission (NLNAC) for Proposed R.N./B.S.N. Distance Education Course Offerings Plan,” written by Dr. Janie McCray, coordinator of R.N./B.S.N. Distance Education Course Offerings for State Farm Technology Faculty Fellows.

Nurse’s Week

In celebration of Nurse’s Week, Mennonite College of Nursing along with the Art Department presented a special exhibition, Les Vœux Fermes (The Cloudy Eyes), a selection of student art from Professor Cynthia Kukla’s class. There also was a selection of archive art done in cooperation with the Biology Department’s gross anatomy lab. An opening reception was held Monday, May 7, 2001, at Edwards Hall, and the exhibition continued through May 12, 2001.
